Organic Waste Recycling

Organics recycling is simply the process of diverting organic materials from landfills. There are a number of ways to recycle organic materials including donating unused food products to food banks, mulching and composting the materials, or separating the materials for waste collectors. Organic materials can be successfully diverted from landfills through a process that begins with separating the materials at the source, keeping the materials separated from other solid waste materials during transportation, and properly identifying and processing the material at specialized facilities.

Acceptable Organics Materials

Baked goods, breads (bagels, english muffins, pita and croûtons), coffee grounds and tea leaves, dairy products, eggs, sugar, corn meal, herbs and spices, leftovers and table scraps, meat, fish, shellfish and bones, nuts, grains and noodles, popcorn, rice and beans, coffee filters and tea bags, egg cartons, flour, sugar and cornmeal bags (no plastic liners), pizza delivery boxes (if not greasy, recycle), napkins and paper towels (no chemical cleaners), food-soiled wax and parchment paper, house plants and flower bouquets, natural bottle corks, natural decor (grounds, mini-pumpkins) and wooden popsicle sticks and toothpicks.

Yard Waste / Green Waste

Non-treated / non-toxic wood, grass and plant trimmings, seasonal greens (no wires, no decorations), twigs, leaves, weeds, woodchips and yard trimmings

Unacceptable Items / Materials

Landscape material (rocks, sod, dirt), kitty litter, animal feces, freezer or fridge boxes, chip bags, diapers, sanitary products, paper towels that have chemicals / cleaning solutions on them. clothing, microwavable popcorn bags, grease or oil, foam products of any kind (packing peanuts or foam cups), gum, dental floss, rubber bands, plastic coated paper products (cups, plates, bowls) and any items that should go into the recycle or trash bins / carts
